HEI Claim for Metric 2.4.2

Over the past five years, the Higher Education Institution (HEI) has consistently pursued excellence in teaching resources by diligently filling vacant faculty positions with top-tier candidates. On average, approximately 22.2% of these positions have been filled by individuals holding doctorate degrees.

$$\text{Percentage} = \frac{\text{Total number of faculty with Ph. D during last five years}}{\text{Total Number of faculty during last five year}} \times 100$$

$$\text{Percentage} = \frac{91}{410} \times 100$$

$$\text{Percentage} = 22.2$$

Due to the pandemic, many faculty members pursuing doctoral degrees faced delays in completing their programs. The Higher Education Institution (HEI) encourages faculty members to pursue higher degrees, anticipating that approximately 32% of them would obtain their doctorate degrees over the last five years. However, the pandemic disrupted these plans, resulting in a delay in degree completion.

Despite the delay, HEI still prioritizes filling vacant positions with faculty members who are in the process of obtaining their doctorate degrees. As a result, there might be a slight adjustment in the metric used to evaluate faculty qualifications, considering the unforeseen circumstances caused by the pandemic.

Thus, HEI requests to factor in the pandemic-induced delays in degree completion when evaluating the metric for filling vacant positions, maintaining the institution's commitment to supporting faculty members in their academic pursuits.

To provide evidence of faculty members pursuing doctorates, the Higher Education Institution (HEI) has submitted: Ph. D registration certificate/course work completion certificate/ comprehensive viva completion report. Along with this the following documents are submitted by the HEI to substantiate its claim for 2.4.2: List of faculty members with doctoral degrees and their respective certificates.
